

The 2011 NERSC employs instructors with a wide variety of practical, real world management backgrounds, including:

- Vice President of Technology Consulting with consulting engineering group. Holds an MBA in Information Systems and degrees in economics, business administration and electrical engineering technology. Vice-president of education for the Association of Information Technologies (AIT-Global), former chairman of a task force on intelligent buildings systems.
- Vice President and principal in a consulting firm with offices in New England, Delaware, Ohio, Georgia, and Texas. Previously Chief of Technical Security for the White House Communications Agency. His duties included providing the President of the United States with direct command and control of both conventional and nuclear U.S. military forces.
- An attorney, consultant, and strategic partner with a Washington, DC based consulting firm. Legislative Liaison to the Commander-in-Chief US Special Operations Command, Legislative Liaison (US House of Representatives) to the Chief of Staff of the Air Force.
- Master's Degree in Management Information Systems and has worked in various levels of management for over 15 years. Currently works as Director of IT for a pharmaceutical services firm where he is responsible for the technical direction of the company.
- MBA and BA in Education and Mathematics and Postgraduate Diploma in Strategic Intelligence. Currently Vice President of Security Operations for a provider of overseas medical and security assistance from 24-hour call centers and clinics around the world.
- BS in physics and an MBA in Engineering Management. Has provided overall direction of manufacturing R&D and quality efforts for producibility of low observable structures (stealth). Has had Western Hemisphere responsibility for the structural engineering and nondestructive testing (NDT) support of in-service business jets.